DOUBLE OFFENSIVE IN PICARDY YIELDS 8 IMPORTANT TOWNS FOR THE ALLIES

GENERLL BYNG OF "TANK" FAME IN A SEPARATE BRILLIANT THRUST IN FOG RIDDLES ENEMY LINE

LUDENDORFF CALLS FOR 1920 CLASS

By United Press

Eight important towns and villages and many positions of strategical value fell to the Allies in a double offensive in Picardy today. General Mangin extended his front to take in the whole firing line between the Oise and the Aisne, a point of 25 miles, taking Parlipont and other villages.

Simultaneously General Byng's third British army struck on a ten mile front north of the Ancre and within three hours had taken Moyenneville, Courcelles, Bucquoy, Beaucourt-sur-Ancre, Albainseville and Achiet-le-Petit. General Byng's smash was made in a heavy fog. The British were astride the enemy front line before the latter awoke to his danger. Large bags of prisoners were taken.

General Mangin has swept his left wing forward an additional three miles in the Oise valle today. His forces are within a mile and a half of Noyon according to late dispatches via London. The right wing also made fresh advances.

General von Ludendorff has called upon the German high command for immediate training of the German class of 1920. It is expected that the new class will be fighting within ten to twelve weeks. Dispatches from Webb Miller stated that this is interpreted by the Allied officers that Germany will start a desperate offensive in the coming Autumn if General Foch will ease up and let the enemy reassemble his resources in men and material.

The British attack this morning was on a sector between Albert and Arras. Advices cabled from London at 1.15 reported that the British had reached Achiet-le-Grand 3 miles northwest of B[illegible]ume. This represented an advance of 3 miles, and at othe[illegible]nts the penetration attained exceeded 2 miles. The at[illegible]ack made without artillery preparation.

[illegible]oners said that it had been expected for a week but nevertheless it was a surprise when the Tommies came pouring over the German trenches and within an hour sections of the old line had been passed. Moyenneville was taken without any assistance at 8.50 and Courcelles was taken at 7.15. Hundreds of prisoners and much material were taken within the first three hours. The British sustained only a few casualties in the first two hours.

Dispatches from Paris reported that the French had outflanked Ourchamps forest and were at Pontoise, 2 miles southeast of Noyon. Bleancourt and Camenlin have been passed by General Mangin's troops swinging against Noyon from the southeast. This showed a total penetration for the French in that region of 6 miles since Saturday. Tanks are being used to value in the Allied operations. They blazed a way for the British through the fog this morning and did effective work.

32 DIVISIONS OR 1'400'000 MEN ARE NOW IN FRANCE SAYS MARCH

By United Press

Washington, Aug. 21.—Thirty-two complete organized army divisions or about 1,400,000 men are now in France, Chief of Staff March announced today. The divisions are as follows: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 32, 33, 35, 36, 37, 41, 42, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 85, 89, 90, 91, 92 and 93. March pointed out that to accomplish this remarkable task it has been necessary to scour the world for ships, while to reach the proposed four million mark it will be necessary to secure more shipping

The Chief pointed significantly to the fact that the general effect of the blows recently dealt the Germans had been to shorten the whole line from the North Sea to Rheims so that it now stands only 200 miles long—a reduction of 50 miles during the past week's operations He identified, as the fifth division, the American unit which took Frapelle in the St Die region. Smashing in this salient left the Americans 5 miles from the German frontier. Reviewing efforts of the last few days March pointed out that the Allies had continued attacks on widely separated points.

Captain George Cary of the schooner Godspeed reported seeing a large steamer firing at an object in the water early yesterday morning. The schooner was going at a good speed and the flash of her guns could be plainly seen according to Captain Cary.

LUDENDORFF MAY TAKE PLACE OF HINDENBURG

By United Press

Reports have been current for some time in neutral countries that Ludendorff had succeeded Hindenburg in command of the western front because of the illness of the latter.

MICHIGAN PRIMARY ENGAGES ATTENTION OF ENTIRE NATION

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 21.—The present political campaign in Michigan, which today enters upon its final week, is one of the most complicated in the entire history of the State. Politicians with years of practical experience hesitate to voice a prediction as to the results of next Tuesday's primaries, when both parties are to name complete tickets of State, senatorial, congressional, legislative and county officers.

A big question mark symbolizes the situation with regards to the nominations for United States senator to succeed William Adlen Smith, whose term will expire next March, and who has declined to be a candidate for renomination.

Henry Ford, multi-millionaire automobile manufacturer and philanthropist, is the outsanding figure in the senatorial race, as his name will go on both the Republican and Democratic tickets. But although every issue in the campaign centers about Mr. Ford he is the only inactive candidate From the time that his name was first mentioned in connection with the senatorial nomination he has declined to do anything to further his candidacy.

Mr. Ford declares that he does not believe in the game of politics as it is usually conducted. For the professional politician he has little or no use. He asserts that his fellow citizens know him and can nominate him if they want to. He will serve them, he says, to the best of his ability.

Mr. Ford's participation in politics has been so slight that when he was first discussed as a possible candidate for the senate there was doubt as to which party he owed affiliation. Accordingly, friends in each party nominated him. Republicans claimed this was a trick of the Democrats to enable the latter to invade the Republican primary and beat the field by voting for Mr Ford At the last minute, however, James W. Helme entered the Democratic primary in opposition and defeated any prospects of such a proceeding.

Mr. Helme, who has a wide acquaintance among the farmers of the State by reason of his position as editor of the State Grange publications, is not an organization Democrat He is allied with another independent, Edward Fresndorf, who is running fo the Democratic gubernatorial nomination against John W Bailey, the selection of the party leaders in the conference which proposed the Ford campaign.

On the Republican ticket, Mr Ford has three opponents. Regarded as probably the most formidable of the three is Truman H. Newberry of Detroit, who was Secretary of the Navy under President Roosevelt, and now commander of the New York Naval District, having enlisted in the service at the commencement of the war with Germany. Mr. Newberry is believed to have a large personal following among the Republicans of the State

Another prominent candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination, and the first to enter the contest, is Chase S Osborn of Sault Ste Marie, who served a term in the governorship several years ago Like Mr Newberry, the ex-Governor is a Roosevelt man. He was one of the governors who invited Colonel Roosevelt to form the Progressive party.

The fourth aspirant for the Republican senatorial nomination, William G Simpson of Detroit, is not seriously considered by the others in the race Mr. Simpson was third in the presidential primary in which Mr Ford defeated Senator Smith In that election, also, Mr. Ford was not an avowed candidate. He even issued a statement asking his friends not to vote for him after his name could not be removed from the ballot for technical reasons But he defeated Senator Smith and now the Republican leaders entertain some fear that he may be nominated on both tickets in next week's primary, then withdraw from theirs and leave them without a candidate

U-BOAT OFF ATLANTIC COAST SEIZES TRAWLER AND HOLDS IT A PRIZE

By United Press

A Canadian Port, Aug. 21—German submarines raiding the Atlantic Coast have seized the steam trawler Triumph, placed it in command of a prize crew, and began operation against the fishing fleets.

Crews from several vessels landing here today said that the vessel is armed with two guns. The vessel is able to come close to the unsuspecting fishing smacks and work havoc among ships because of its lineness to a patrol the crew stated.

SENATE COMMITTEE HOLDS UP 18 TO 45 MANPOWER BILL

Definite rejection of the war department's program for administration of the new manpower bill was voted late yesterday by the House Committee on Military affairs.

By a vote of 9 to 7 the committee adopted an amendment sponsored by Representative Dent, chairman of the committee, providing deferred classification for eighteen and nineteen year old men under the new draft ages

The Dent amendment would divide men subject to service into three classes, eighteen to nineteen, nineteen to twenty and twenty to forty-five and provide that the twenty to forty-five class should be called first, then the nineteen to twenty group and the eighteen-year class only when the other two had been exhausted. This proposal is entirely opposed to program of the administration as urged to the committee by the secretary of war, General March, chief of staff and General Crowder, provost marshal.

The administration had no objection to men below nineteen years being placed in a special class, but it does not desire to be hamstrung by legislative provisions that might interfere with the new military program. Adoption of the Dent amendment means a fight on the floor of the House, with Representative Julius Kahn, of California, ranking Republican member of the committee, leading the administration fight, a repetition of the situation which prevailed when the selective service act originaly was debated in the House.

ALCORN HEADS REPUBLICANS OF DUBOIS

[illegible] Chairman [illegible] As Committee Secretary

W. H. ALBERT [illegible]

In pursuance to a call issued by City Chairman J. K. Thompson, the city Vilgance committee of DuBois held a meeting last evening and elected a chairman. G. Milton Alcorn, one of the active party workers for many years, was selected over Jack McNeil, a younger but just as active worker. These were the only two men nominated Mr. McNeil made a very fine speech following the election, complimenting his opponent on his election, pledging his support and calling upon all committeemen to do likewise. Lloyd Shefler was nominated and elected as secretary without opposition, as was Herbert Albert as treasurer.

There was a very excellent turnout of committeemen when retiring Chairman J. K. Thompson called the meeting to order. He outlined the purpose of the meeting and after some debate in regard to the advisability of going ahead at this time, it was decided to elect, as the time is growing short and it is necessary that some work be done immediately.

Mr. Alcorn's selection followed. Retiring Chairman Thompson made a few remarks, in which he thanked the committeemen for the excellent work that they had done in the past year and requested them to continue under the new chairman. Mr. Alcorn made a brief speech, in which he stated that the unexpectedness of the honor left him with little to say other than that he appreciated the confidence shown in him and that he would work energetically to justify this confidence.

The meeting adjourned to meet within two weeks, at which time it is expected that all new committeemen will be present.

Mr Alcorn, who was last evening chosen as city chairman of the Republican City Vigilance committee, has been closely identified with the political world of DuBois for many years In fact, ever since Mr. Alcorn has been a resident of DuBois he has been found working energetically for the success of the party and there is no doubt that in his election the Republican party has secured a man who will put forth every effort possible to bring success in the future. He has held many positions of trust and has always fulfilled his obligations to the party.

New York City now has a number of apartment hotels exclusively for women.

The father who was fined for inhumanely whipping his child recently, makes a statement in this issue. This statement is his own version of the unfortunate affair and we are not to sit as judge on his case. We can only comment that if an injustice has been done it is unfortunate; on the other hand, we cannot help but remark that we are glad that the authorities are quick to investigate cases of this kind. There has been too much of it in Clearfield recently.

JOHN BULL AT IT AGAIN

Just about the time some of those Briton haters were getting ready to tell us again that England was laying down on the job, Gen. Byng jolted Hindy with a bang. Since General Foch is commanding every operation on the western front it is all up to him to say who shall go forward and when. During the last three weeks we have seen the Yanks, the French and the British taking their turns at the guns. And mark our word, the British are going to do just what the Yanks and the French have done. Were it not for the fighting the British have done since the war started we might all be kow-towing to Kaiser Bill today.

COMMON GROUND

Captain Edwin Denby of the Marine Corps was leaving Paris Island, S. C., the great eastern training camp for Devil Dog recruits. He was talking things over with his successor, Lieutenant Arthur Brenner Jacques. The practice of law was mentioned.

"That once was my profession," said Captain Denby, "I was a Congressman from Michigan."

"And I," said Lieutenant Jacques, "was a page in the House of Representatives."

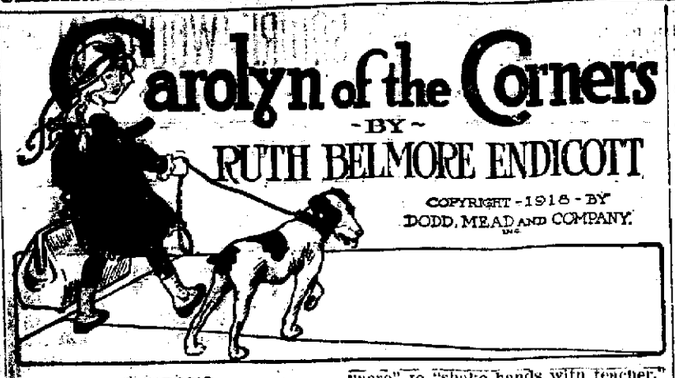

Just then the door opened, and in walked Private Ward E. Arbury, of the 205th Company, U. S. Marines. "This completes the triangle," said the Captain. "Private Arbury formerly was my secretary in Congress."

Proving thereby, that it's a small, small world, especially when the Marines are concerned.

WHAT WE THINK OF THE WAR

One of the most common questions today is "what do you think of the war by this time?" Almost daily someone asks another this question and in turn the one who is questioned usually goes into a lengthy discussion of the issues and what he thinks will be the next move of the Allies or of the Huns. Any one we think may safely predict that the Allies will go forward and that the enemy will go further to the rear but as for predicting when it will happen and at what point we are all in the dark and since we know practically nothing of conditions over there our opinions are as a rule not worth mentioning though these discussions do help to pass away the time and keep our interest keyed up to a high pitch. We may be thankful that we seldom hear those lamenting remarks such as "it looks bad today" and "this awful war". We also notice that the fellow who just came from the city with inside information has found that somebody handed him a lemon and is more careful to not repeat everything he hears in a Pullman car. When we attempt to tell all that we think of the war we are taking on a pretty good sized contract and after the telling of it we doubt very much whether the end of the war would be hastened thereby or anybody would be very much enlightened.

Our greatest "think" about the war concerns the winning of the war, not by our troops over there, whom we can trust to do their part, but by those of us who remain at home and are morally responsible for the keeping and sustenance of them. That is our part and if many of the loafing place conclaves on battle field strategy were changed into discussions on how best to increase our Liberty Bond, War Savings Stamps holdings and production of materials a great deal more good would come of them.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Her father and mother reported lost when the Dunraven was destroyed by a submarine, Carolyn May goes to live with her bachelor uncle, Joseph Stagg, at The Corners. The reception of herself and her mongrel cur by her uncle and his housekeeper, Aunty Rose Kennedy, is not very enthusiastic.

CHAPTER II—Aunty Rose rules the home with an iron hand, but is not unkind to the child.

CHAPTER III—Stagg learns from a letter from a New York lawyer that the child has been left practically penniless. Carolyn's sunny disposition begins to make an impression on the stern housekeeper.

CHAPTER IV—Carolyn makes the acquaintance of Jedidiah Parlow, with whom her uncle has not been on speaking terms for years.

CHAPTER V—She learns of the estrangement between her uncle and his one-time sweetheart, Amanda Parlow, and the cause of the bitterness between the two families.

CHAPTER VI—The mongrel wins the approval of the entire population by routing a tramp in the act of robbing the school teacher.

CHAPTER VII.

A Sunday Walk.

Really if Prince had been a vain dog his ego would certainly have become unduly developed because of this incident. The Corners, as a community, voted him an acquisition, whereas heretofore he had been looked upon as a good deal of a nuisance.

After she recovered from her fright Miss Minnie walked home with Carolyn May and allowed Prince's delighted little mistress to encourage the "hero" to "shake hands with teacher."

"Now, you see, he's acquainted with you, Miss Minnie," said Carolyn May. "He's an awful nice dog. You didn't know just how nice he was before."

Almost everybody went to church and all the children to Sunday school, which was held first.

The Rev. Afton Driggs, though serious-minded, was a loving man. He was fond of children and he and his childless wife gave much of their attention to the Sunday school. Mrs. Driggs taught Carolyn May's class of little girls. Mrs. Driggs did her very best, too, to get the children to stay to the preaching service, but Carolyn May had to confess that the pastor's discourses were usually hard to understand.

"And he is always reading about the 'Begats.'" she complained gently to Uncle Joe as they went home together on this particular Sunday, "and I can't keep interested when he does that. I s'pose the 'Begats' were very nice people, but I'm sure they weren't related to us—they've all got such funny names."

"Hum!" ejaculated Uncle Joe, smothering a desire to laugh. "Flow gently, sweet Afton, does select his passages of Scripture mostly from the 'valleys of dry bones.' I allow. You've got it about right there, Carolyn May."

"Uncle Joe," said the little girl, taking her courage in both hands, "will you do something for me?" Then, as he stared down at her from under his bushy brows, she added: "I don't mean that you aren't always doing something for me—letting me sleep here at your house and eat with you and all that. But something special."

"What is the 'something special?'" asked Mr. Stagg cautiously.

"Something I want you to do today. You always go off to your store after dinner and when you come home it's too dark."

"Too dark for what?"

"For us to take a walk," said the little girl very earnestly. "Oh, Uncle Joe, you don't know how dreadful I miss taking Sunday walks with my papa! Of course we took 'em in the morning, for he had to go to work on the paper in the afternoon, but we did just about go everywhere. If you would go with me," the little girl added wistfully, "just this afternoon, seems to me I wouldn't feel so—so empty."

"Humph!" said Uncle Joe, clearing his throat. "If it's going to do you any particular good, Carolyn May, I suppose I can take a walk with you."

It was a crisp day—one of those autumn days when the tang of frost remains in the air, in spite of all the efforts of the sun to warm it.

Here and there they stopped to pick up the glossy brown chestnuts that had burst from their burrs. That is, Carolyn May and her uncle did. Prince, after a single attempt to nose one of the prickly burrs, left them strictly alone.

"You might just as well try to eat Aunty Rose's strawberry needle cushion, Princey," the little girl said wisely. "You'll have a sorer nose than Amos Bartlett had when he tried to file it down with a wood rasp."

"Hum!" ejaculated Mr. Stagg, "whatever possessed that Bartlett child to do such a fool trick?"

"Why, you know his nose is awfully big," said Carolyn May. "And his mother is always worried about it. She must have worried Amos, too, for one day last week he went over to Mr. Parlow's shop, borrowed a wood rasp and tried to file his nose down to a proper size. And now he has to go with his nose all greased and shiny till the new skin grows back on it."

"Bless me, what these kids will do!" muttered Mr. Stagg.

Mrs. Dumbleton, daughter Miss Fannie and a little grandson motored from Philipsburg to Curwensville Sunday and spent the day with Mrs. A. G. Ammerman.

Walter Fullerton, Miss Mary Veloke, Miles Fullerton and Miss Margaret Patterson were Clearfield visitors.

The case of diphtheria at the home of James Edmonston is a very slight form of the disease and it is likely that the sign will be removed from the house in a day or two.

George Richards has rented the room formerly occupied by Al Owens as a saddler shop and will conduct an automobile tire repair shop, using the vulcanizing process. It is an industry that was badly needed in this town, as persons had to go to Clearfield to have this kind of work done.

The miners at the Caldwell & Norris mines at Hyde City are still out. They were receiving the scale price, 106 and 15-100 per ton, and now are asking a raise of 5 cents per ton over the scale price. The owners are willing to deal fairly with the men, but being members of the association cannot grant the raise as they would be subect to a heavy fine. It is more than likely that the matter will be referred to Federal officers for adjustment. There is not a man employed at these mines, if he is a miner, who does not make an average of from $8 to $10 per day. Outside men are paid not less than $5 per day.

Citizens who reside on Irvin Hill are complaining that there are too many dogs running at large over there at night. They are not only kept awake at night by their fighting and howling but the canines take the liberty of running all over the front porches and disturbing the peace in general.

Sexton George Fleming of Oak Hill cemetery, reports a mysterious grave on one of the polts. He says that it had been freshly dug and that the work was done at night. He cannot account for it and has reported the matter to the Board of Health, who it is said will make an investigation, and ascertain if a body has been buried there without a permit. Mr. Fleming probed the fresh mound with an iron rod and failed to find anything that resembled a coffin or box, and his theory is that if a child is buried there it lies in the ground without the proper rough box or coffin. The mystery will probably be cleared up within the next few days.

A man named Gearhart, accompanied by a Mr. Campbell and his wife, had a head end collision with a car belonging to Morris Kephart on Main street opposite Way's storeMonday afternoon. Both cars were facing each other and Kephart got out to crank his car for starting, when something went wrong and thecar got away from him and jambed into the front of the Kephart car, tearing a tire off and cutting it so badly that it was useless, and also doubling up the fender. After summing up the damages Mr. Gearhart paid for the tire and other damages and both parties went on their way satisfied that the compromise was a fair and just one.

Percy Holton received a card from his brother, Wayne Holton, notifying him that he had arrived safely in Paris and that he expected to be sent on to the front at once. He is serving in one of the aerial serivce squadrons, and likes his duties first rate.

Robert McCracken, one of Kerrmoor's prominent citizens, was a Curwensville visitor yesterday. He transacted a volume of business for himself and others while here.

Messrs, Crissman Holton, Kephart and Wright all residents of the South Side, are contemplating taking a three weeks' automobile trip. Their itinerary will take them through New York state, some of the eastern states, and on the return trip will visit some of the famous battle fields of the south.

Mrs. Chas. Maurer, who was operated on in the Clearfield hospital several weeks ago, was able to be brot to her home at Lumber City this week She is now on a fair road to a full recovery of health such as she enjoyed prior to her illness.

Miss Ethel Hipps, a sister of William Hipps of this place, was in town yesterday. Miss Hipps will soon sail for France, having joined the Red Cross corps as a nurse. The best wishes of her many friends here and at Lumber City, her former home, will follow her to her new location and wish her nothing but success in her chosen profession.

Anthony Vanco, a coal miner, had one of his feet quite severely injured while at work in one of the up-river mines yesterday. H was brought to the office of Dr. King, who dressed the wound.

Isaac Myers, who left this town over thirty years ago and located at Bellwood, was a town visitor yesterday. He was visiting his brother, John Myers, over on South Side. Mr. Myers followed railroading on the Bell's Gap road until he had a foot taken off, and since that time has been employed as head store keeper for that road in Bellwood.

Mrs. Ake left for Philadelphia last evening, having been summoned to that city on account of the serious illness of her father, he having been operated on in one of the hospitals there recently, but did not get along as well as was expected.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Zwosky, at their home on North street, on the 18th inst., a boy baby. Both parents are proud of its arrival.

Mrs. J. S McKenrick, of Ebensburg announced the engageent of her daughter Miss Elsie McKenrick to John K. Mentzer, of Brooklyn, N. Y. at a party given at her home on Julian street, Wednesday, August 14. About sixty guests were present from town, Clearfield, Altoona, Johnstown, Pittsburgh and Baltimore.

Miss McKenrick is the youngest daughter of the late Attorney J. F. McKenrick and is well known socially and musically in this section. Mr. Mentzer is a graduate of Penna State College and is a civil-electrical engineer in the ordnance department in the New York navy yard.

The wedding will take place in the late autumn.

SQUIRE WOODS IN LETTER TELLS OF GLORIES OF WEST

On train between Fargo and Bismarck, Dakotas, Aug. 16, 6 p. m.

Dear Mr. Connelly:

I promised to write you a letter about my trip to the G. A. R. Encampment at Portland, Oregon, so here goes. We are now passing through the great Dalrymple farms south of Fargo. The scene cannot be described in words, it must be seen to form any conception of it. It is said that the only country in the world to compare it with is the valley of the Nile.

Wheat, wheat, wheat, as far as the eye can see, on either side of the railroad—Northern Pacific. It is all in shock and stacks and any word picture I might draw of it would be in vain.

I have to stop look, but not listen in wonder and surprise to view the immensity of it. It is nothing like our conception of wheat fields but there are rather whole counties of it.

A man told Col. George Reem, W. P. Mahaffey and myself that this is the richest valley in the world and it surely looks like it. As many of your readers know, the U. S. Government once condemned this land because of its alkaline properties. But the Northern Pacific people got the Dalrymple people to come here and test the soil and soon proved the government was mistaken about this Red River valley. The Red River is their only river and runs north into Lake Winnebago.

The Dalrymple people have 38,000 acres in wheat and it will run about 28 to 31 bushels to the acre.

I am afraid Comrades Runk and Mahaffey will buy a farm and leave me to come home alone. They are certainly infatuated with it. Oh, what a country we have. The man who gave us our information about it, the same being verified by another traveler, said this is surely a strange country, the river runs north and there are whole counties without a Democrat in them. A man is regarded as a small farmer who has only 1600 acres all on stock.

I am writing this while our train is running 60 miles an hour, with the passengers around me talking as loud as they can in order to make themselves heard, so you can see how difficult it is to collect a man's thoughts under the circumstances. Runk tells me Mahaffey is talking of purchasing several thousand acres of wheat now.

Everything looks very prosperous in this country. Fine buildings, autos, tractors wherever you look. Good looking, sociable people, no wonder Runk and Mahaffey are married to the country. Mahaffey got into conversation with a middle-aged widow who owns a 2500 acre farm and so far forgot himself that he travelled 40 miles past his junction point and we had to wait two hours to get him back on the next train.

We are well and enjoying ourselves every minute. More anon.

Yours truly,
C. A. WOOD.

Baseball "Aces" Magnets When En Route and Help to Keep Turnstile Spinning

The ball club that has to worry along without a playing "ace" is a back number as a drawing card on the road.

The outstanding stars are the "aces" in the big show, for their names are kept before the public, and the fans go out to see them perform. Without them in the lineups of big league clubs

Tyrus Raymond Cobb.

many and many thousands of dollars would wander away from the turnstiles.

The "aces" are the biggest assets the magnates can boast of, and if you will lamp the rosters of the sixteen major league clubs you will find at least one player on nearly every roster who figures as the real drawing card of the team on the road.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb is the greatest drawing card in the business. He is worth more to Detroit on the road than all the rest of her players put together for the fans in rival towns go out largely to see Cobb, unless the Tigers are up there fighting for a pennant, and the rabids in small towns within easy riding distance of the big league cities never miss a chance to be on the job when Cobb is billed to cavort at the ball park. So Cobb alone is worth thousands of dollars to Detroit at the turnstiles in the course of a season.

When the Belgian government, in 1882, introduced the practice of employing women in the railroad, postal and telegraph services, the innovation found many indignant opponents.

RUTH BELMORE ENDICOTT

(Copyright, 1918, by Dodd, Mead & Company, Inc.)

It was not at that moment that the [illegible] and [illegible] became really good comrades on this walk, not with [illegible] adventure. At least to Carolyn May it was a real adventure and one she was not to forget for a long, long time.

Prince suddenly bounded away barking, down a pleasant glade through the bottom of which flowed a brook. Carolyn May caught a glimpse of something brown moving down there and she called shrilly to the dog to come back.

"But that's somebody, Uncle Joe," Carolyn May said with assurance, as the dog slowly returned. "Prince never barks like that unless it's a person. And I [illegible] something move."

"[illegible] taking a walk, like us. Couldn't be a deer," said Mr. Stagg.

"Oh," cried Carolyn May later, "I see it again. That's a skirt I see. Why, it's a lady!"

Mr. Stagg suddenly grew very stern looking, as well as silent. All the beauty of the day and of the glade they had entered seemed lost on him. He went on stubbornly, yet as though loath to proceed.

"Why," murmured Carolyn May, "it's Miss Amanda Parlow! That's who it is!"

The carpenter's daughter was sitting on a bare brown log by the brook. She was dressed very prettily, all in brown.

Carolyn May wanted awfully to speak to Miss Amanda. The brown lady with the pretty roses in her cheeks sat on a log by the brook, her [illegible] turned from the path Joseph [illegible] and his little niece were coming along.

And Uncle Joe was quite stubborn. He stared straight ahead down the path without letting the figure on the log get into the focus of his vision.

Hanging to Uncle Joe's hand but looking longingly at the silent figure on the log, Carolyn May was going down to the stepping stones by which they were to cross the brook, when suddenly Prince came to a halt right at the upper end of the log and his body stiffened.

"What is it, Prince?" whispered his little mistress. "Come here."

But the dog did not move. He even growled—not at Miss Amanda, of course, but at something on the log. And it was just then that Carolyn May wanted to scream—and she could not!

For there on the log, rearing its flat, wicked head out of an aperture, was a [illegible], a horrid, silent, writhing [illegible] the [illegible] of which held the little girl [illegible]-stricken and speechless.

[illegible] looked down impatiently, to see what made her hold back so. The child's feet seemed glued to the [illegible]. She could not take another step.

Writhing out of the hole in the log and coiling, as it did so, into an attitude to strike, the snake looked to be dangerous indeed. The fact that it was only a large blacksnake and nonpoisonous made no difference at that moment to the dog or to the little girl—nor to Joseph Stagg when he saw it.

It was coiled right at Miss Amanda's back. She did not see it, for she was quite as intent upon keeping her face turned from Mr. Stagg as he had been [illegible] to ignore her presence.

Carolyn May was shaking all [illegible]. Not so Prince. He repeated his [illegible] and then sprang at the vibrating head. Miss Amanda uttered a stifled scream and jumped up from the log, whirling to see what was happening behind her.

Joseph Stagg dropped Carolyn May's hand and leaped forward with his walking stick raised to strike. But the monster [illegible] was there first. He wisely [illegible] the blacksnake behind the head [illegible] it up [illegible] several times [illegible].

"Good dog!" [illegible] Mr. Stagg [illegible]. "Good dog!"

"Oh, Miss Amanda!" shrieked Carolyn May. "I—I thought he was going to sting you—I did!"

She ran to the startled woman and hung to her hand. Prince nosed the dead snake. Mr. Stagg looked exceedingly foolish. Miss Amanda recovered her color and her voice simultaneously.

"What a brave dog yours is, little girl," she said to Carolyn May. "And I do so despise snakes!" Then she looked directly at Mr. Stagg and bowed gravely. "I thank you," she said but so coldly, so Carolyn May thought, that her voice might have come "just off an iceberg."

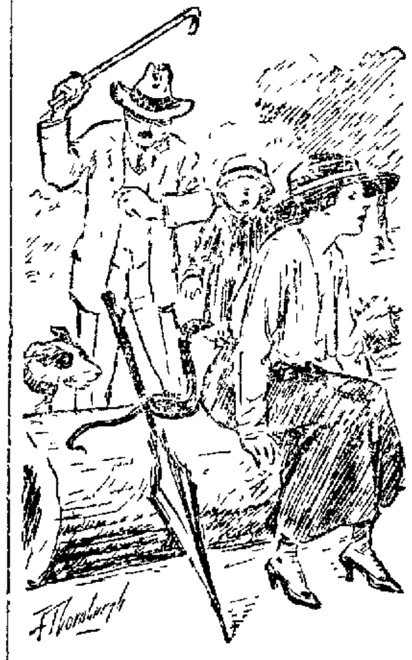

"Oh, I didn't do nothing—really I didn't," stammered the [illegible]. "It was the dog."

Both looked very uncomfortable. Joseph Stagg [illegible] [illegible] whispered [illegible].

"Come to see me, my dear. I want to know you better."

Then she [illegible] Carolyn May and stepped quickly away [illegible] the brook [illegible] quickly [illegible] the [illegible].

Joseph Stagg and the little girl went on across the stepping stones. [illegible] Prince [illegible] through the water. Carolyn May was thinking about Miss Amanda Parlow and she believed that Uncle Joe was, too.

Leaped Forward With His Walking Stick to Strike.

"Uncle Joe," she said, "would that bad old snake have stung Miss Amanda?"

"Huh? No; I reckon not," admitted Mr. Stagg absent-mindedly. "Blacksnakes don't bite. A big one like that can squeeze some."

"But you were scared of it—like me and Prince. And for Miss Amanda," [illegible] Carolyn May very much in earnest.

"I guess most everybody is scared by the sight of a snake, Car'lyn May."

"But you were scared for Miss Amanda's sake—just the same as I was," repeated the little girl decidedly.

"Well?" he growled, looking away troubled by her insistence.

"Then you don't hate her, do you?" the child insisted. "I'm glad of that, Uncle Joe, for I like her very much. I think she's a beautiful lady."

To this Uncle Joe said nothing.

"I guess," thought Carolyn May wisely, "that when two folks love each other and get angry the love's there just the same. Getting mad doesn't kill it; it only makes 'em feel worse.

"Poor Uncle Joe! Poor Miss Amanda! Maybe if they'd just try to look up and look for brighter things they'd get over being mad and be happy again."

When Uncle Joe and Carolyn May returned from this adventurous walk Mr. Stagg went heavily into his own room, closed the door and even locked it. He went over to the old-fashioned walnut bureau that stood against the wall between the two windows and stood before it for some moments in an attitude of deep reflection. Finally, he drew his bunch of keys from his pocket and opened one of the two small drawers in the heavy piece of furniture—the only locked drawer there was. He drew forth a tintype picture, faded now, but clear enough to show him the features of the two individuals printed on the sensitized plate.

His own eyes looked out of the photograph proudly. They were much younger eyes than they were now.

And the girl beside him in the picture! Sweet as a wild rose, Mandy Parlow's lovely, calm countenance promised all the beauty and dignity her matured womanhood had achieved.

"Mandy! Mandy!" he murmured over and over again. "Oh, Mandy! Why? Why?"

He held the tintype for a long, long time in his hand gazing on it with eyes that saw the vanished years rather than the portraits themselves. Finally he hid the picture away again, closed and locked the drawer with a sigh and with slow steps left the room.

HE SURE WANTS TO BE A "DEVIL DOG"

Baltimore, Md,, August. 19—Because he had a picture of the kaiser tatooed on his breast, Arthur Randolph Martin, of Paden City, W. Va., is going to undergo a serious and painful operation so that he will not be "joshed" nor his loyalty to the United States questioned by his fellow Marines after enlistment.

Martin was a tattoed man with a circus in civil life. He is a regular walking moving picture show. On his chest is done a large picture of the German war lord.

"I'm going to enlist in the Marine corps in a few days," Martin told the recruiting sergeant "but I'm going to the hospital first and have the piece of skin that contains this thing removed and new skin grafted on in its place. If the job is successful, I can then enlist and go to camp without being afraid to take my clothes off before my pals."

TWINS ARE "DEVIL DOGS" NOW

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 20.—John J. Ayars and George W. Ayars, of this city, are twins George enlisted in the Naval Reserve last month. John couldn't "see" anything but the Marine Corps so he enlisted with the devil dogs. All their lives the twins had been inseparable. They were anxious to serve their country, but the separation proved unendurable. Mrs. Ayars learning that her twin boys were unhappy went to Washington and succeeded in getting George discharged from the Naval Reserve so that he could enlist in the Marine Corps. The twins, happily reunited, are now both of them devil dogs, and have been transferred to the Marine Corps camp at Paris Island. They will be assigned to the same organization while undergoing training, and whenever they go away for active duty they will be kept in the same outfit.

August Blanket Sale

Preparing Your Bedcovering Needs for the Cold Months Ahead Should Be Done at Once

We hardly think it necessary to go into reasons, because every housewife has read about the enormous requirements of our Army for blankets, and the situation requires foresight and IMMEDIATE action. It is not a question of our getting more blankets, because prices would prohibit us from so doing. The blankets on our shelves were bought early last winter. So if you are going to pursue a policy of "safety first," take our advice and purchase during the next few days.

The Question of Blankets Is Gone Into Thoroughly in Today's Advertisement

"What are you going to do about blankets this year, Mrs. ——?" is a remark heard every day. So why not ask yourself this question: WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT BLANKETS? You've read all about what manufacturers have had to say, about the apparent scarcity; so it will be good news for you to hear that this store has not been caught napping. We were determined that the term "shortage" would be heard very little here, and as a result are showing blankets in a range just as complete as in former years. However, all the reasons that pointed to early purchasing heretofore apply with equal or greater force this season. Because so great will be the demand of new customers who will turn to us that we doubt whether our supplies will meet all needs.

He is not seriously injured, although it will take several days treatment before the slash in his groin heals sufficiently to allow him to leave the hospital.

LUDENDORFF CALLS FOR 1920 CLASS

By United Press

Eight important towns and villages and many positions of strategical value fell to the Allies in a double offensive in Picardy today. General Mangin extended his front to take in the whole firing line between the Oise and the Aisne, a point of 25 miles, taking Parlipont and other villages.

Simultaneously General Byng's third British army struck on a ten mile front north of the Ancre and within three hours had taken Moyenneville, Courcelles, Bucquoy, Beaucourt-sur-Ancre, Albainseville and Achiet-le-Petit. General Byng's smash was made in a heavy fog. The British were astride the enemy front line before the latter awoke to his danger. Large bags of prisoners were taken.

General Mangin has swept his left wing forward an additional three miles in the Oise valle today. His forces are within a mile and a half of Noyon according to late dispatches via London. The right wing also made fresh advances.

General von Ludendorff has called upon the German high command for immediate training of the German class of 1920. It is expected that the new class will be fighting within ten to twelve weeks. Dispatches from Webb Miller stated that this is interpreted by the Allied officers that Germany will start a desperate offensive in the coming Autumn if General Foch will ease up and let the enemy reassemble his resources in men and material.

The British attack this morning was on a sector between Albert and Arras. Advices cabled from London at 1.15 reported that the British had reached Achiet-le-Grand 3 miles northwest of B[illegible]ume. This represented an advance of 3 miles, and at othe[illegible]nts the penetration attained exceeded 2 miles. The at[illegible]ack made without artillery preparation.

[illegible]oners said that it had been expected for a week but nevertheless it was a surprise when the Tommies came pouring over the German trenches and within an hour sections of the old line had been passed. Moyenneville was taken without any assistance at 8.50 and Courcelles was taken at 7.15. Hundreds of prisoners and much material were taken within the first three hours. The British sustained only a few casualties in the first two hours.

Dispatches from Paris reported that the French had outflanked Ourchamps forest and were at Pontoise, 2 miles southeast of Noyon. Bleancourt and Camenlin have been passed by General Mangin's troops swinging against Noyon from the southeast. This showed a total penetration for the French in that region of 6 miles since Saturday. Tanks are being used to value in the Allied operations. They blazed a way for the British through the fog this morning and did effective work.

32 DIVISIONS OR 1'400'000 MEN ARE NOW IN FRANCE SAYS MARCH

By United Press

Washington, Aug. 21.—Thirty-two complete organized army divisions or about 1,400,000 men are now in France, Chief of Staff March announced today. The divisions are as follows: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 32, 33, 35, 36, 37, 41, 42, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 85, 89, 90, 91, 92 and 93. March pointed out that to accomplish this remarkable task it has been necessary to scour the world for ships, while to reach the proposed four million mark it will be necessary to secure more shipping

The Chief pointed significantly to the fact that the general effect of the blows recently dealt the Germans had been to shorten the whole line from the North Sea to Rheims so that it now stands only 200 miles long—a reduction of 50 miles during the past week's operations He identified, as the fifth division, the American unit which took Frapelle in the St Die region. Smashing in this salient left the Americans 5 miles from the German frontier. Reviewing efforts of the last few days March pointed out that the Allies had continued attacks on widely separated points.

Washington, Aug. 20—The government warned today that German submarines may be landing enemy agents on American coasts. The warning followed the reports that sailors had seen a man who was on a boat which sank a ship, drinking at a New York bar.

HEAVY FIRING IS AGAIN HEARD OFF ATLANTIC COAST

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 21—Reports of heavy firing 85 miles off the Atlantic coast which may indicate a battle between a steamer and a submarine were brought here today by captains of several vessels. Captain George Cary of the schooner Godspeed reported seeing a large steamer firing at an object in the water early yesterday morning. The schooner was going at a good speed and the flash of her guns could be plainly seen according to Captain Cary.

LUDENDORFF MAY TAKE PLACE OF HINDENBURG

By United Press

London, Aug. 21—Swiss reports received here declare that Ludendorff had succeeded General Hindenburg in command of western front operations. Reports have been current for some time in neutral countries that Ludendorff had succeeded Hindenburg in command of the western front because of the illness of the latter.

MICHIGAN PRIMARY ENGAGES ATTENTION OF ENTIRE NATION

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 21.—The present political campaign in Michigan, which today enters upon its final week, is one of the most complicated in the entire history of the State. Politicians with years of practical experience hesitate to voice a prediction as to the results of next Tuesday's primaries, when both parties are to name complete tickets of State, senatorial, congressional, legislative and county officers.

A big question mark symbolizes the situation with regards to the nominations for United States senator to succeed William Adlen Smith, whose term will expire next March, and who has declined to be a candidate for renomination.

Henry Ford, multi-millionaire automobile manufacturer and philanthropist, is the outsanding figure in the senatorial race, as his name will go on both the Republican and Democratic tickets. But although every issue in the campaign centers about Mr. Ford he is the only inactive candidate From the time that his name was first mentioned in connection with the senatorial nomination he has declined to do anything to further his candidacy.

Mr. Ford declares that he does not believe in the game of politics as it is usually conducted. For the professional politician he has little or no use. He asserts that his fellow citizens know him and can nominate him if they want to. He will serve them, he says, to the best of his ability.

Mr. Ford's participation in politics has been so slight that when he was first discussed as a possible candidate for the senate there was doubt as to which party he owed affiliation. Accordingly, friends in each party nominated him. Republicans claimed this was a trick of the Democrats to enable the latter to invade the Republican primary and beat the field by voting for Mr Ford At the last minute, however, James W. Helme entered the Democratic primary in opposition and defeated any prospects of such a proceeding.

Mr. Helme, who has a wide acquaintance among the farmers of the State by reason of his position as editor of the State Grange publications, is not an organization Democrat He is allied with another independent, Edward Fresndorf, who is running fo the Democratic gubernatorial nomination against John W Bailey, the selection of the party leaders in the conference which proposed the Ford campaign.

On the Republican ticket, Mr Ford has three opponents. Regarded as probably the most formidable of the three is Truman H. Newberry of Detroit, who was Secretary of the Navy under President Roosevelt, and now commander of the New York Naval District, having enlisted in the service at the commencement of the war with Germany. Mr. Newberry is believed to have a large personal following among the Republicans of the State

Another prominent candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination, and the first to enter the contest, is Chase S Osborn of Sault Ste Marie, who served a term in the governorship several years ago Like Mr Newberry, the ex-Governor is a Roosevelt man. He was one of the governors who invited Colonel Roosevelt to form the Progressive party.

The fourth aspirant for the Republican senatorial nomination, William G Simpson of Detroit, is not seriously considered by the others in the race Mr. Simpson was third in the presidential primary in which Mr Ford defeated Senator Smith In that election, also, Mr. Ford was not an avowed candidate. He even issued a statement asking his friends not to vote for him after his name could not be removed from the ballot for technical reasons But he defeated Senator Smith and now the Republican leaders entertain some fear that he may be nominated on both tickets in next week's primary, then withdraw from theirs and leave them without a candidate

By United Press

A Canadian Port, Aug. 21—German submarines raiding the Atlantic Coast have seized the steam trawler Triumph, placed it in command of a prize crew, and began operation against the fishing fleets.

Crews from several vessels landing here today said that the vessel is armed with two guns. The vessel is able to come close to the unsuspecting fishing smacks and work havoc among ships because of its lineness to a patrol the crew stated.

SENATE COMMITTEE HOLDS UP 18 TO 45 MANPOWER BILL

Definite rejection of the war department's program for administration of the new manpower bill was voted late yesterday by the House Committee on Military affairs.

By a vote of 9 to 7 the committee adopted an amendment sponsored by Representative Dent, chairman of the committee, providing deferred classification for eighteen and nineteen year old men under the new draft ages

The Dent amendment would divide men subject to service into three classes, eighteen to nineteen, nineteen to twenty and twenty to forty-five and provide that the twenty to forty-five class should be called first, then the nineteen to twenty group and the eighteen-year class only when the other two had been exhausted. This proposal is entirely opposed to program of the administration as urged to the committee by the secretary of war, General March, chief of staff and General Crowder, provost marshal.

The administration had no objection to men below nineteen years being placed in a special class, but it does not desire to be hamstrung by legislative provisions that might interfere with the new military program. Adoption of the Dent amendment means a fight on the floor of the House, with Representative Julius Kahn, of California, ranking Republican member of the committee, leading the administration fight, a repetition of the situation which prevailed when the selective service act originaly was debated in the House.

ALCORN HEADS REPUBLICANS OF DUBOIS

[illegible] Chairman [illegible] As Committee Secretary

W. H. ALBERT [illegible]

In pursuance to a call issued by City Chairman J. K. Thompson, the city Vilgance committee of DuBois held a meeting last evening and elected a chairman. G. Milton Alcorn, one of the active party workers for many years, was selected over Jack McNeil, a younger but just as active worker. These were the only two men nominated Mr. McNeil made a very fine speech following the election, complimenting his opponent on his election, pledging his support and calling upon all committeemen to do likewise. Lloyd Shefler was nominated and elected as secretary without opposition, as was Herbert Albert as treasurer.

There was a very excellent turnout of committeemen when retiring Chairman J. K. Thompson called the meeting to order. He outlined the purpose of the meeting and after some debate in regard to the advisability of going ahead at this time, it was decided to elect, as the time is growing short and it is necessary that some work be done immediately.

Mr. Alcorn's selection followed. Retiring Chairman Thompson made a few remarks, in which he thanked the committeemen for the excellent work that they had done in the past year and requested them to continue under the new chairman. Mr. Alcorn made a brief speech, in which he stated that the unexpectedness of the honor left him with little to say other than that he appreciated the confidence shown in him and that he would work energetically to justify this confidence.

The meeting adjourned to meet within two weeks, at which time it is expected that all new committeemen will be present.

Mr Alcorn, who was last evening chosen as city chairman of the Republican City Vigilance committee, has been closely identified with the political world of DuBois for many years In fact, ever since Mr. Alcorn has been a resident of DuBois he has been found working energetically for the success of the party and there is no doubt that in his election the Republican party has secured a man who will put forth every effort possible to bring success in the future. He has held many positions of trust and has always fulfilled his obligations to the party.

New York City now has a number of apartment hotels exclusively for women.

The father who was fined for inhumanely whipping his child recently, makes a statement in this issue. This statement is his own version of the unfortunate affair and we are not to sit as judge on his case. We can only comment that if an injustice has been done it is unfortunate; on the other hand, we cannot help but remark that we are glad that the authorities are quick to investigate cases of this kind. There has been too much of it in Clearfield recently.

JOHN BULL AT IT AGAIN

Just about the time some of those Briton haters were getting ready to tell us again that England was laying down on the job, Gen. Byng jolted Hindy with a bang. Since General Foch is commanding every operation on the western front it is all up to him to say who shall go forward and when. During the last three weeks we have seen the Yanks, the French and the British taking their turns at the guns. And mark our word, the British are going to do just what the Yanks and the French have done. Were it not for the fighting the British have done since the war started we might all be kow-towing to Kaiser Bill today.

COMMON GROUND

Captain Edwin Denby of the Marine Corps was leaving Paris Island, S. C., the great eastern training camp for Devil Dog recruits. He was talking things over with his successor, Lieutenant Arthur Brenner Jacques. The practice of law was mentioned.

"That once was my profession," said Captain Denby, "I was a Congressman from Michigan."

"And I," said Lieutenant Jacques, "was a page in the House of Representatives."

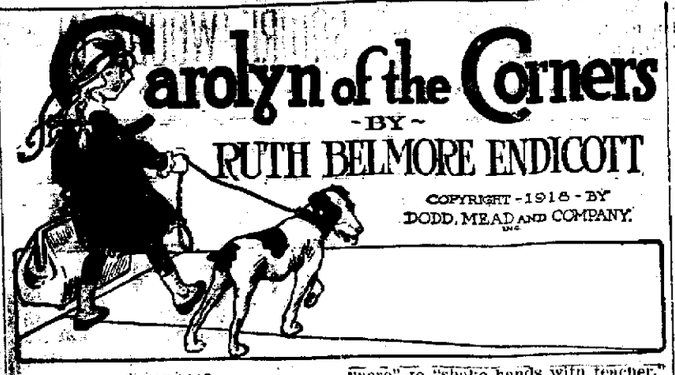

Just then the door opened, and in walked Private Ward E. Arbury, of the 205th Company, U. S. Marines. "This completes the triangle," said the Captain. "Private Arbury formerly was my secretary in Congress."

Proving thereby, that it's a small, small world, especially when the Marines are concerned.

WHAT WE THINK OF THE WAR

One of the most common questions today is "what do you think of the war by this time?" Almost daily someone asks another this question and in turn the one who is questioned usually goes into a lengthy discussion of the issues and what he thinks will be the next move of the Allies or of the Huns. Any one we think may safely predict that the Allies will go forward and that the enemy will go further to the rear but as for predicting when it will happen and at what point we are all in the dark and since we know practically nothing of conditions over there our opinions are as a rule not worth mentioning though these discussions do help to pass away the time and keep our interest keyed up to a high pitch. We may be thankful that we seldom hear those lamenting remarks such as "it looks bad today" and "this awful war". We also notice that the fellow who just came from the city with inside information has found that somebody handed him a lemon and is more careful to not repeat everything he hears in a Pullman car. When we attempt to tell all that we think of the war we are taking on a pretty good sized contract and after the telling of it we doubt very much whether the end of the war would be hastened thereby or anybody would be very much enlightened.

Our greatest "think" about the war concerns the winning of the war, not by our troops over there, whom we can trust to do their part, but by those of us who remain at home and are morally responsible for the keeping and sustenance of them. That is our part and if many of the loafing place conclaves on battle field strategy were changed into discussions on how best to increase our Liberty Bond, War Savings Stamps holdings and production of materials a great deal more good would come of them.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Her father and mother reported lost when the Dunraven was destroyed by a submarine, Carolyn May goes to live with her bachelor uncle, Joseph Stagg, at The Corners. The reception of herself and her mongrel cur by her uncle and his housekeeper, Aunty Rose Kennedy, is not very enthusiastic.

CHAPTER II—Aunty Rose rules the home with an iron hand, but is not unkind to the child.

CHAPTER III—Stagg learns from a letter from a New York lawyer that the child has been left practically penniless. Carolyn's sunny disposition begins to make an impression on the stern housekeeper.

CHAPTER IV—Carolyn makes the acquaintance of Jedidiah Parlow, with whom her uncle has not been on speaking terms for years.

CHAPTER V—She learns of the estrangement between her uncle and his one-time sweetheart, Amanda Parlow, and the cause of the bitterness between the two families.

CHAPTER VI—The mongrel wins the approval of the entire population by routing a tramp in the act of robbing the school teacher.

CHAPTER VII.

A Sunday Walk.

Really if Prince had been a vain dog his ego would certainly have become unduly developed because of this incident. The Corners, as a community, voted him an acquisition, whereas heretofore he had been looked upon as a good deal of a nuisance.

After she recovered from her fright Miss Minnie walked home with Carolyn May and allowed Prince's delighted little mistress to encourage the "hero" to "shake hands with teacher."

"Now, you see, he's acquainted with you, Miss Minnie," said Carolyn May. "He's an awful nice dog. You didn't know just how nice he was before."

Almost everybody went to church and all the children to Sunday school, which was held first.

The Rev. Afton Driggs, though serious-minded, was a loving man. He was fond of children and he and his childless wife gave much of their attention to the Sunday school. Mrs. Driggs taught Carolyn May's class of little girls. Mrs. Driggs did her very best, too, to get the children to stay to the preaching service, but Carolyn May had to confess that the pastor's discourses were usually hard to understand.

"And he is always reading about the 'Begats.'" she complained gently to Uncle Joe as they went home together on this particular Sunday, "and I can't keep interested when he does that. I s'pose the 'Begats' were very nice people, but I'm sure they weren't related to us—they've all got such funny names."

"Hum!" ejaculated Uncle Joe, smothering a desire to laugh. "Flow gently, sweet Afton, does select his passages of Scripture mostly from the 'valleys of dry bones.' I allow. You've got it about right there, Carolyn May."

"Uncle Joe," said the little girl, taking her courage in both hands, "will you do something for me?" Then, as he stared down at her from under his bushy brows, she added: "I don't mean that you aren't always doing something for me—letting me sleep here at your house and eat with you and all that. But something special."

"What is the 'something special?'" asked Mr. Stagg cautiously.

"Something I want you to do today. You always go off to your store after dinner and when you come home it's too dark."

"Too dark for what?"

"For us to take a walk," said the little girl very earnestly. "Oh, Uncle Joe, you don't know how dreadful I miss taking Sunday walks with my papa! Of course we took 'em in the morning, for he had to go to work on the paper in the afternoon, but we did just about go everywhere. If you would go with me," the little girl added wistfully, "just this afternoon, seems to me I wouldn't feel so—so empty."

"Humph!" said Uncle Joe, clearing his throat. "If it's going to do you any particular good, Carolyn May, I suppose I can take a walk with you."

It was a crisp day—one of those autumn days when the tang of frost remains in the air, in spite of all the efforts of the sun to warm it.

Here and there they stopped to pick up the glossy brown chestnuts that had burst from their burrs. That is, Carolyn May and her uncle did. Prince, after a single attempt to nose one of the prickly burrs, left them strictly alone.

"You might just as well try to eat Aunty Rose's strawberry needle cushion, Princey," the little girl said wisely. "You'll have a sorer nose than Amos Bartlett had when he tried to file it down with a wood rasp."

"Hum!" ejaculated Mr. Stagg, "whatever possessed that Bartlett child to do such a fool trick?"

"Why, you know his nose is awfully big," said Carolyn May. "And his mother is always worried about it. She must have worried Amos, too, for one day last week he went over to Mr. Parlow's shop, borrowed a wood rasp and tried to file his nose down to a proper size. And now he has to go with his nose all greased and shiny till the new skin grows back on it."

"Bless me, what these kids will do!" muttered Mr. Stagg.

The Sunday school class of Mrs. W. L. Dale held a delightful picnic in the Pee Wees Nest gorve yesterday. Both teacher and pupils enjoyed the outing immensely.

Mrs. Edward Girrill gave a birthday party last Saturday evening. The event was given in honor of the 15th birthday anniversary of Thomas Forcey. The evening was spent enjoyably by all who were present.

Mrs. Dumbleton, daughter Miss Fannie and a little grandson motored from Philipsburg to Curwensville Sunday and spent the day with Mrs. A. G. Ammerman.

Walter Fullerton, Miss Mary Veloke, Miles Fullerton and Miss Margaret Patterson were Clearfield visitors.

The case of diphtheria at the home of James Edmonston is a very slight form of the disease and it is likely that the sign will be removed from the house in a day or two.

George Richards has rented the room formerly occupied by Al Owens as a saddler shop and will conduct an automobile tire repair shop, using the vulcanizing process. It is an industry that was badly needed in this town, as persons had to go to Clearfield to have this kind of work done.

The miners at the Caldwell & Norris mines at Hyde City are still out. They were receiving the scale price, 106 and 15-100 per ton, and now are asking a raise of 5 cents per ton over the scale price. The owners are willing to deal fairly with the men, but being members of the association cannot grant the raise as they would be subect to a heavy fine. It is more than likely that the matter will be referred to Federal officers for adjustment. There is not a man employed at these mines, if he is a miner, who does not make an average of from $8 to $10 per day. Outside men are paid not less than $5 per day.

Citizens who reside on Irvin Hill are complaining that there are too many dogs running at large over there at night. They are not only kept awake at night by their fighting and howling but the canines take the liberty of running all over the front porches and disturbing the peace in general.

Sexton George Fleming of Oak Hill cemetery, reports a mysterious grave on one of the polts. He says that it had been freshly dug and that the work was done at night. He cannot account for it and has reported the matter to the Board of Health, who it is said will make an investigation, and ascertain if a body has been buried there without a permit. Mr. Fleming probed the fresh mound with an iron rod and failed to find anything that resembled a coffin or box, and his theory is that if a child is buried there it lies in the ground without the proper rough box or coffin. The mystery will probably be cleared up within the next few days.

A man named Gearhart, accompanied by a Mr. Campbell and his wife, had a head end collision with a car belonging to Morris Kephart on Main street opposite Way's storeMonday afternoon. Both cars were facing each other and Kephart got out to crank his car for starting, when something went wrong and thecar got away from him and jambed into the front of the Kephart car, tearing a tire off and cutting it so badly that it was useless, and also doubling up the fender. After summing up the damages Mr. Gearhart paid for the tire and other damages and both parties went on their way satisfied that the compromise was a fair and just one.

Percy Holton received a card from his brother, Wayne Holton, notifying him that he had arrived safely in Paris and that he expected to be sent on to the front at once. He is serving in one of the aerial serivce squadrons, and likes his duties first rate.

Robert McCracken, one of Kerrmoor's prominent citizens, was a Curwensville visitor yesterday. He transacted a volume of business for himself and others while here.

Messrs, Crissman Holton, Kephart and Wright all residents of the South Side, are contemplating taking a three weeks' automobile trip. Their itinerary will take them through New York state, some of the eastern states, and on the return trip will visit some of the famous battle fields of the south.

Mrs. Chas. Maurer, who was operated on in the Clearfield hospital several weeks ago, was able to be brot to her home at Lumber City this week She is now on a fair road to a full recovery of health such as she enjoyed prior to her illness.

Miss Ethel Hipps, a sister of William Hipps of this place, was in town yesterday. Miss Hipps will soon sail for France, having joined the Red Cross corps as a nurse. The best wishes of her many friends here and at Lumber City, her former home, will follow her to her new location and wish her nothing but success in her chosen profession.

Anthony Vanco, a coal miner, had one of his feet quite severely injured while at work in one of the up-river mines yesterday. H was brought to the office of Dr. King, who dressed the wound.

Isaac Myers, who left this town over thirty years ago and located at Bellwood, was a town visitor yesterday. He was visiting his brother, John Myers, over on South Side. Mr. Myers followed railroading on the Bell's Gap road until he had a foot taken off, and since that time has been employed as head store keeper for that road in Bellwood.

Mrs. Ake left for Philadelphia last evening, having been summoned to that city on account of the serious illness of her father, he having been operated on in one of the hospitals there recently, but did not get along as well as was expected.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Zwosky, at their home on North street, on the 18th inst., a boy baby. Both parents are proud of its arrival.

Mrs. J. S McKenrick, of Ebensburg announced the engageent of her daughter Miss Elsie McKenrick to John K. Mentzer, of Brooklyn, N. Y. at a party given at her home on Julian street, Wednesday, August 14. About sixty guests were present from town, Clearfield, Altoona, Johnstown, Pittsburgh and Baltimore.

Miss McKenrick is the youngest daughter of the late Attorney J. F. McKenrick and is well known socially and musically in this section. Mr. Mentzer is a graduate of Penna State College and is a civil-electrical engineer in the ordnance department in the New York navy yard.

The wedding will take place in the late autumn.

SQUIRE WOODS IN LETTER TELLS OF GLORIES OF WEST

On train between Fargo and Bismarck, Dakotas, Aug. 16, 6 p. m.

Dear Mr. Connelly:

I promised to write you a letter about my trip to the G. A. R. Encampment at Portland, Oregon, so here goes. We are now passing through the great Dalrymple farms south of Fargo. The scene cannot be described in words, it must be seen to form any conception of it. It is said that the only country in the world to compare it with is the valley of the Nile.

Wheat, wheat, wheat, as far as the eye can see, on either side of the railroad—Northern Pacific. It is all in shock and stacks and any word picture I might draw of it would be in vain.

I have to stop look, but not listen in wonder and surprise to view the immensity of it. It is nothing like our conception of wheat fields but there are rather whole counties of it.

A man told Col. George Reem, W. P. Mahaffey and myself that this is the richest valley in the world and it surely looks like it. As many of your readers know, the U. S. Government once condemned this land because of its alkaline properties. But the Northern Pacific people got the Dalrymple people to come here and test the soil and soon proved the government was mistaken about this Red River valley. The Red River is their only river and runs north into Lake Winnebago.

The Dalrymple people have 38,000 acres in wheat and it will run about 28 to 31 bushels to the acre.

I am afraid Comrades Runk and Mahaffey will buy a farm and leave me to come home alone. They are certainly infatuated with it. Oh, what a country we have. The man who gave us our information about it, the same being verified by another traveler, said this is surely a strange country, the river runs north and there are whole counties without a Democrat in them. A man is regarded as a small farmer who has only 1600 acres all on stock.

I am writing this while our train is running 60 miles an hour, with the passengers around me talking as loud as they can in order to make themselves heard, so you can see how difficult it is to collect a man's thoughts under the circumstances. Runk tells me Mahaffey is talking of purchasing several thousand acres of wheat now.

Everything looks very prosperous in this country. Fine buildings, autos, tractors wherever you look. Good looking, sociable people, no wonder Runk and Mahaffey are married to the country. Mahaffey got into conversation with a middle-aged widow who owns a 2500 acre farm and so far forgot himself that he travelled 40 miles past his junction point and we had to wait two hours to get him back on the next train.

We are well and enjoying ourselves every minute. More anon.

Yours truly,
C. A. WOOD.

Baseball "Aces" Magnets When En Route and Help to Keep Turnstile Spinning

The ball club that has to worry along without a playing "ace" is a back number as a drawing card on the road.

The outstanding stars are the "aces" in the big show, for their names are kept before the public, and the fans go out to see them perform. Without them in the lineups of big league clubs many and many thousands of dollars would wander away from the turnstiles.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb.

The "aces" are the biggest assets the magnates can boast of, and if you will lamp the rosters of the sixteen major league clubs you will find at least one player on nearly every roster who figures as the real drawing card of the team on the road.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb is the greatest drawing card in the business. He is worth more to Detroit on the road than all the rest of her players put together for the fans in rival towns go out largely to see Cobb, unless the Tigers are up there fighting for a pennant, and the rabids in small towns within easy riding distance of the big league cities never miss a chance to be on the job when Cobb is billed to cavort at the ball park. So Cobb alone is worth thousands of dollars to Detroit at the turnstiles in the course of a season.

When the Belgian government, in 1882, introduced the practice of employing women in the railroad, postal and telegraph services, the innovation found many indignant opponents.

Carolyn of the Corners

By RUTH BELMORE ENDICOTT

(Copyright, 1918, by Dodd, Mead & Company, Inc.)

It was not at that moment that the little girl and the man, becoming really good comrades on this walk, met with an adventure. At least to Carolyn May it was a real adventure and one she was not to forget for a long, long time.

Prince suddenly bounded away barking, down a pleasant glade through the bottom of which flowed a brook. Carolyn May caught a glimpse of something brown moving down there and she called shrilly to the dog to come back.

"But that's somebody, Uncle Joe!" Carolyn May said with assurance, as the dog slowly returned. "Prince never barks like that unless it's a person. And I saw something move."

"Somebody taking a walk, like us. Couldn't be a deer," said Mr. Stagg.

"Oh," cried Carolyn May later, "I see it again. That's a skirt I see. Why, it's a lady!"

Mr. Stagg suddenly grew very stern looking, as well as silent. All the beauty of the day and of the glade they had entered seemed lost on him. He went on stubbornly, yet as though loath to proceed.

"Why," murmured Carolyn May, "it's Miss Amanda Parlow! That's who it is!"

The carpenter's daughter was sitting on a bare brown log by the brook. She was dressed very prettily, all in brown.

Carolyn May wanted awfully to speak to Miss Amanda. The brown lady with the pretty roses in her cheeks sat on a log by the brook, her face turned from the path Joseph Stagg and his little niece were coming along.

And Uncle Joe was quite stubborn. He stared straight ahead down the path without letting the figure on the log get into the focus of his vision.

Hanging to Uncle Joe's hand but looking longingly at the silent figure on the log, Carolyn May was going down to the stepping stones by which they were to cross the brook, when suddenly Prince came to a halt right at the upper end of the log and his body stiffened.

"What is it, Prince?" whispered his little mistress. "Come here."

But the dog did not move. He even growled—not at Miss Amanda, of course, but at something on the log. And it was just then that Carolyn May wanted to scream—and she could not!

For there on the log, rai ing its flat, wicked head out of an aperture, was a snake, a brutal, silent, writhing reptile the look of which held the little girl stricken and speechless.

From ... peered down impatiently, to see what made her hold back so. The child's feet seemed glued to the ... She could not take another ...

Writhing out of the hole in the log and coiling, as it did so, into an attitude to strike, the snake looked to be dangerous indeed. The fact that it was only a large blacksnake and nonpoisonous made no difference at that moment to the dog or to the little girl—nor to Joseph Stagg when he saw it.

It was coiled right at Miss Amanda's back. She did not see it, for she was quite as intent upon keeping her face turned from Mr. Stagg as he had been ... to ignore her presence.

Carolyn May was shaking all ... Not so Prince. He repeated his ... and then sprang at the vibrating head. Miss Amanda uttered a ... and jumped up from the log, whirling to see what was happening behind her.

Joseph Stagg dropped Carolyn May's hand and leaped forward with his walking stick raised to strike. But the mongrel dog was there first. He wisely ... the blacksnake behind the head ... it up ... several times ...

"Good dog!" ... ed Mr. Stagg ... "Good dog!"

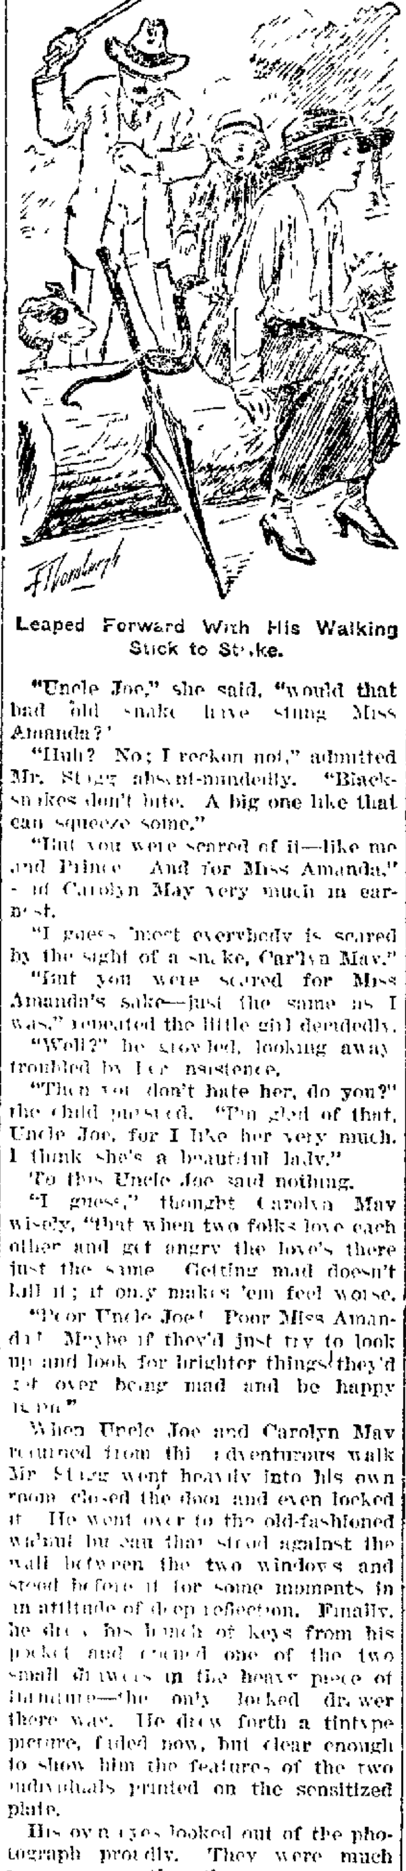

"Oh, Miss Amanda!" shrieked Carolyn May. "I—I thought he was going to sting you—I did!"

She ran to the startled woman and clung to her hand. Prince nosed the dead snake. Mr. Stagg looked exceedingly foolish. Miss Amanda recovered her color and her voice simultaneously.

"What a brave dog yours is, little girl," she said to Carolyn May. "And I do so despise snakes!" Then she looked directly at Mr. Stagg and bowed gravely. "I thank you," she said, but so coldly, so Carolyn May thought, that her voice might have come "just off an iceberg."

"Oh, I didn't do anything—really I didn't," stammered the man. "It was the dog."

Both looked very uncomfortable. Joseph Stagg ... ... turned his ... whispered ...

Leaped Forward With His Walking Stick to Strike.

"Come to see me, my dear. I want to know you better."

Then she kissed Carolyn May and stepped quickly away from the brook ... quickly in the under...

Joseph Stagg and the little girl went on across the stepping stones. The Prince splashed through the water. Carolyn May was thinking about Miss Amanda Parlow and she believed that Uncle Joe was, too.

"Uncle Joe," she said, "would that bad old snake have stung Miss Amanda?"

"Huh? No; I reckon not," admitted Mr. Stagg absent-mindedly. "Blacksnakes don't bite. A big one like that can squeeze some."

"But you were scared of it—like me and Prince. And for Miss Amanda," said Carolyn May very much in earnest.

"I guess 'most everybody is scared by the sight of a snake, Car'lyn May."

"But you were scared for Miss Amanda's sake—just the same as I was," repeated the little girl decidedly.

"Well?" he growled, looking away troubled by her insistence.

"Then you don't hate her, do you?" the child pursued. "I'm glad of that, Uncle Joe, for I like her very much. I think she's a beautiful lady."

To this Uncle Joe said nothing.

"I guess," thought Carolyn May wisely, "that when two folks love each other and get angry the love's there just the same. Getting mad doesn't kill it; it only makes 'em feel worse.

"Poor Uncle Joe! Poor Miss Amanda! Maybe if they'd just try to look up and look for brighter things they'd get over being mad and be happy again."

When Uncle Joe and Carolyn May returned from this adventurous walk Mr. Stagg went heavily into his own room, closed the door and even locked it. He went over to the old-fashioned walnut bureau that stood against the wall between the two windows and stood before it for some moments in an attitude of deep reflection. Finally, he drew his bunch of keys from his pocket and opened one of the two small drawers in the heavy piece of furniture—the only locked drawer there was. He drew forth a tintype picture, faded now, but clear enough to show him the features of the two individuals printed on the sensitized plate.

His own eyes looked out of the photograph proudly. They were much younger eyes than they were now.

And the girl beside him in the picture! Sweet as a wild rose, Mandy Parlow's lovely, calm countenance promised all the beauty and dignity her matured womanhood had achieved.

"Mandy! Mandy!" he murmured over and over again. "Oh, Mandy! Why? Why?"

He held the tintype for a long, long time in his hand gazing on it with eyes that saw the vanished years rather than the portraits themselves. Finally he hid the picture away again, closed and locked the drawer with a sigh and with slow steps left the room.

HE SURE WANTS TO BE A "DEVIL DOG"

Baltimore, Md,, August. 19—Because he had a picture of the kaiser tatooed on his breast, Arthur Randolph Martin, of Paden City, W. Va., is going to undergo a serious and painful operation so that he will not be "joshed" nor his loyalty to the United States questioned by his fellow Marines after enlistment.

Martin was a tattoed man with a circus in civil life. He is a regular walking moving picture show. On his chest is done a large picture of the German war lord.

"I'm going to enlist in the Marine corps in a few days," Martin told the recruiting sergeant "but I'm going to the hospital first and have the piece of skin that contains this thing removed and new skin grafted on in its place. If the job is successful, I can then enlist and go to camp without being afraid to take my clothes off before my pals."

TWINS ARE "DEVIL DOGS" NOW

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 20.—John J. Ayars and George W. Ayars, of this city, are twins. George enlisted in the Naval Reserve last month. John couldn't "see" anything but the Marine Corps so he enlisted with the devil dogs. All their lives the twins had been inseparable. They were anxious to serve their country, but the separation proved unendurable. Mrs. Ayars learning that her twin boys were unhappy went to Washington and succeeded in getting George discharged from the Naval Reserve so that he could enlist in the Marine Corps. The twins, happily reunited, are now both of them devil dogs, and have been transferred to the Marine Corps camp at Paris Island. They will be assigned to the same organization while undergoing training, and whenever they go away for active duty they will be kept in the same outfit.

August Blanket Sale

Preparing Your Bedcovering Needs for the Cold Months Ahead Should Be Done at Once

We hardly think it necessary to go into reasons, because every housewife has read about the enormous requirements of our Army for blankets, and the situation requires foresight and IMMEDIATE action. It is not a question of our getting more blankets, because prices would prohibit us from so doing. The blankets on our shelves were bought early last winter. So if you are going to pursue a policy of "safety first," take our advice and purchase during the next few days.

The Question of Blankets Is Gone Into Thoroughly in Today's Advertisement

"What are you going to do about blankets this year, Mrs. ——?" is a remark heard every day. So why not ask yourself this question: WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT BLANKETS? You've read all about what manufacturers have had to say, about the apparent scarcity; so it will be good news for you to hear that this store has not been caught napping. We were determined that the term "shortage" would be heard very little here, and as a result are showing blankets in a range just as complete as in former years. However, all the reasons that pointed to early purchasing heretofore apply with equal or greater force this season. Because so great will be the demand of new customers who will turn to us that we doubt whether our supplies will meet all needs.

Edward Endres who was carved by Lewis Andrews in the rear of Dufton's hardware store at noon yesterday, is resting quite comfortable at the hospital. He is not seriously injured, although it will take several days treatment before the slash in his groin heals sufficiently to allow him to leave the hospital.

The colored man who did the slashing was not in the kitchen at the Windsor but in the passageway leading from the alley toward the kitchen in rear of the sample room where Mr. Endres was asked to take him out. The negro is very hard of hearing and his friends claim this handicap was responsible for the affray, as he did not understand or hear when told to move on.
